Woman's Filial Love-Another Victim to a Cruel and Unnecessary War.

From the St. Louis Republican. There is a beautiful daughter of the South now in this city, whose sensibilities we would not wound by giving publicity to her name. Every calamity that war may beget has befallen her family, kindred, fortune and home. effect that defendant indersed the note for the accommodation of one Neely, childhood was in the nath of a destroyng army that swept wide districts with asparing desolation. Every species of operty was destroyed, and she and an only brother beggared, and fated to enounter even greater calamities, wandered among strangers. The mother, a weaker weman than the daughter, accustomed to ease, flattery and every pleasure that wealth could buy, yielded never criminally, to the flattery of an army of ficer and everstepped rules of decorum prescribed by the social habits of the South. The father wreaked terrible vengeance upon him who destroyed the deights of his poverty-stricken home, and while the people approved the deed, there was bitterness insufferable in the cup of grief pressed to the lips of the faultless divine faith which never fails to give consolation and strength. His sorrows tion of the statute laws of the United makes no difference whether Haskins indersed it for accommodation or for value.
